

How do you give a home to a non-profit who is always on the move from school to school?
You put that home on wheels.
The Dick and Jane Bus is equipped with a mobile classroom, recording studio and stage. It is envisioned as an exciting and productive space for middle schoolers to collaborate with professional musicians while strengthening their writing skills and finding their voice.
Let's make some music.

The Dick & Jane Project

Mobile Classroom | Recording Studio | Stage

floor plan
The floor plan of The Dick and Jane Bus is carefully and proportionally divided into three areas: classroom, isolation booth, and flex space. The classroom is also host to the recording desk and includes storage space and shelving. The isolation booth is contoured and double as a method of a layer of security/musical access. The flex space can be used as additional classroom space, expanded recording space and as a stage during live shows.

Elevations

elevations
The bus elevations provide recognizable branding and identity for The Dick and Jane Project, while promoting interest and announcing the presence of the classroom or stage event on site.

Plans & Elevations

site scenarios
The Dick and Jane Bus is adaptable to a variety of sites. The primary and most common site setting for the bus is in the parking lot of the host school at which song writing tutorials, workshops and taking place. The secondary setting for the bus may vary from a park, to a field, to a parking lot, to a sidewalk or street. The value of the Dick and Jane Bus lies in its flexibility.

Sections

sections
The interior of the bus is outfitted with several mobile components, including tables, chairs, privacy/security curtains, and a drop down stage. These mobile features allow for efficiency of space and flexibility of program. Furniture can be stored when not in use, and storage space can become additional classroom space as needed.

Sections

Classroom Perspectives

Stage Perspectives

Interior Views